Slander

'Twas but a breath—
And yet a woman's fair name wilted,
And friends once warm were cold and stilled;
And life was worse than death.
One venomous word—
That struck his coward poison blow
In craven whispers, hushed and low,
And yet the wide world heard.
'Twas but one, whispered—one—
That muttered low for very shame
That thing the slanderer dare not name,
And yet its work was done.
A hint so slight—
And yet so mighty in its power,
A human soul in one short hour
Lies crushed beneath its blight.

Lamoille Grange

The evening meeting of Lamoille Grange will be held Friday, July 28. An interesting program has been prepared and each lady is requested to bring five cents for a jenny march. Refreshments will be served.

Some light-fingered people have been helping themselves to flowers and the bolders, taking them from graves in the village cemetery. It will go hard with them if apprehended.

Judge Leach, who went to Burlington Monday for treatment of an eye, had the same removed yesterday, the sight having been gone for some time. The operation was very successful.

Attention is called to the advertisement of the Lamoille Central Academy. In addition to its excellent corps of teachers an agricultural department has been added, which will be in charge of Prof. Wood, a graduate of the agricultural department of the U. V. M.

Everett Newcomb is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Newcomb, after an absence of four years. Everett has been in the newspaper business in the west, but is now connected with an electrical concern in New York City. He is glad to get back for a time among the good old green hills.

Here's a sturdy Vermonter for you: Lucius H. Boyes, aged 86 years, is a farmer who works daily in the field and during the haying season puts in as good a day's work as the rest of them. In swinging a scythe, riding a mowing machine or pitching on a load he shows as little fatigue as many a man of half his years. If there are any other eighty-six year olds that can put up a day's work equal to "Uncle Lucius" we shall be pleased to publish the fact.
